Daily Planet WEEKLY publishing SCHEDULE

About our weekly publishing schedule

Managing a multimedia newsroom requires focus, transparency, and consistency, especially when resources are tight. To keep coverage balanced across all of our sections, the Daily Planet follows a structured Weekly Publishing Schedule designed to reflect both newsroom priorities and reader interests.

News is published daily, often multiple times a day, to ensure timely and accurate reporting on events locally, nationally, and globally.

Each weekday also highlights a core editorial category: Entertainment Mondays, Planet Tuesdays, Comics Wednesdays, Culture Thursdays, and Big Story Fridays, while Voices and Online Editions are on Saturdays and Sundays.

This rhythm keeps our team organized and our coverage consistent while leaving room for breaking stories, special projects, and multimedia work such as podcasts and video columns.

The schedule also provides transparency for contributors and readers who want to understand how stories are prioritized in the Daily Planet's newsroom. We're not perfect, but we're trying ur best to inform.

Print — Online Edition (Tentative)
The Online Editions, published every Sunday, highlight the previous week's coverage. Due to time constraints, they may not always fit into the regular schedule.

NOTES:

The Daily Planet monitors communication channels weekly, analyzing emails, comments, social media, and other relevant information.

While we adhere to set categories and schedules, challenges may arise in addressing certain topics, particularly during quarterly magazine releases.

Additionally, we publish monthly topics such as the Metropolitan of the Month and Book Club announcements that are not on the main list.
